

Appendix A: Replacement Abstract

ABSTRACT

Techniques for managing interrupts transmitted via a shared interrupt interface in a system supporting multiple operating entities. An interrupt message may be received from a generating device via the shared interrupt interface. One or more registers may be checked for data to identify the generating device. An indication of the interrupt message may be transmitted to one or more selected operating entities based on the identity of the device.